

Good Rain Needed Now To Protect $1.5 Million Wheat Crop

The Circleville area got a smidgen of rain Tuesday night, looked like it might get a little more Wednesday.

But it needed a whole of a lot more lest Pickaway County chalk up in advance a financial loss of an estimated $1.5 million.

Farming experts said the area was suffering from drought, that the local 1952 winter wheat crop is teetering on the brink of disaster. A good, soaking rain, followed by a few days of warm weather would be worth $1.5 million (at least) to local farmers.

One of the concerned experts is Larry Best, county agricultural extension agent. He explains the situation as follows:

Pickaway drills 60 to 65,000 acres of winter wheat each fall. The seed hits the earth, is covered and each kernel swells up a little. It then needs moisture to cause sprouting.

So far, that needed moisture has been in short supply. Tuesday night's sprinkle was the first here in weeks.

As of Wednesday about two-thirds of the county's annual wheat crop had been drilled.

Based on 1951 estimated figures, here is what that crop is worth. (And since the 1951 crop was well below average, the figures represent bare minimums):

There were about 60,000 acres of winter wheat farmed in Pickaway in 1951. It averaged only 16 bushels to the acre. The average cash value was about $1.30 a bushel. That is a total value of $1.3 million.

In a normal year, the total acreage would run above 60,000 acres, closer to 65,000. And the yield would average 19 to 21 bushels an acre.

But the 1951 harvest was skimpy. Several reasons have been advanced for this and the main one pivots on the rigors of last winter's severe weather.

Normally, a farmer likes to see his wheat sprout in the fall and then spend the winter under a big blanket of snow. But last winter, while there was snow (plenty of it), there also was a crust of ice at ground surface.

This played havoc with wheat. It pulled up and chopped off some of the delicate stalks. In other places, it virtually smothered the wheat. Small grain needs air even during winter's dormant period. Under snow, it can "breathe." Under a sheet of ice this is not possible.

Last winter's wheat sprouted, but developed "short" heads — fewer kernels per head.

Then, there was less "stooling" last year. This means that fewer heads per stalk developed than were expected.

Some farmers added nitrogen to their fields, but not enough of them to make a good impression on the over-all county picture.

Regardless of the kind of winter which is coming for Pickaway County, the wheat crop now is in a critical period of trial. Mother Nature must come up with a good soaker of rain or Pickaway will have little wheat to harvest next summer. And spring-planted wheat in this area just isn't worth a nickel, the experts say.

So, Mr. Farmer is looking for some mighty nasty weather this week. He needs it badly. He knows it must come this week or next because November is only a few days away.

And he remembers November 1950. It is now only a month shy of a year ago that Pickaway awoke one morning to find itself buried under a blizzard which heralded one of the most severe winters ever recorded here.

So, Mr. Farmer has fingers crossed. He wants a good rain followed by some warmish days. Then let the winds howl.

Laborites, Tories In Final Stages Of Poll Campaign

LONDON, Oct. 24—Britain's general election campaign swung into its final hours today with both parties expressing confidence but with only Britain's women—collectively—really knowing the answer.

The women probably will go to the polls tomorrow in greater numbers than the men and how they vote may decide the fate of the ruling Labor Party in Britain.

The Conservatives remained steady favorites in the betting and public opinion surveys, but the Laborites are in no way pessimistic, saying they may get as much as a 20-seat majority. In 1950, the Labor margin was six seats.

The specter of a "photo-finish" and a similar inconclusive result still is around and some political experts and newspapers say their surveys show no radical shift to the right since the 1950 balloting.

The wider estimates on the size of a Tory majority have all but disappeared and those estimates which favor the Conservatives put the most likely majority at 30.

Crisp, sunny weather is forecast throughout the country raising the estimates of the participation to 85 per cent of the eligible vote.

In a final attempt to inspire their supporters, Prime Minister Attlee, Foreign Secretary Morrison and Conservative Leader Winston Churchill are planning a slam-bang finish with speeches and rallies until late tonight.

Thousands of workers, encouraged by reports that Labor had "narrowed the gap," went from house to house in key constituencies, exhorting doubtful voters to cast their ballots for Labor.

The total number of registered women voters is untabulated, but census figures show approximately 18 million females are entitled to vote compared with about 16.5 million men.

Thus, women, theoretically, hold the balance of political power. And the heavy attendance of women at the campaign meetings and their attentiveness in putting questions to candidates has led to the belief there will be a heavy feminine vote.

It is expected that between 26 and 29 million persons will vote. And the possibility is foreseen this will include nearly a million more women than men.

The Conservatives are confident that a majority of feminine voters now favor a change in government.

They are counting heavily on the support of disgruntled women who, the Conservatives say, "have lost patience with rationing, queues, controls, the meat shortage and the rising cost of living."

But Labor Party leaders have the highest confidence in housewives in the great mass of lower working class families who may vote for the Attlee regime to keep controlled food and rent prices, general family allowances, old age pensions and free medical services.

Hamilton asserted that the GOP leader would go to the convention with enough votes committed to him to make him the Republican standardbearer in the 1952 campaign. Hamilton declared:

"I think he will probably be nominated on the first ballot and certainly on the second."

Lodge, on the other hand, told the audience that he thinks the Republicans are going to find it "very hard to win with anyone besides Gen. Eisenhower."

Supreme Court Puts Gambling Tag On Slots

COLUMBUS, Oct. 24—The Ohio supreme court ruled today that slot machines are gambling devices in themselves even under the old slot machine law.

The case in question was not brought under Ohio's brand new slot machine law, which makes mere possession of a slot machine a felony punishable by a mandatory prison sentence.

The case was that against Edward Shaffer, indicted by the Paulding County grand jury on a charge that, on Sept. 22, 1949, he had exhibited a slot machine on the counter of his place of business.

He was found guilty, but the appellate court reversed the conviction because the deputy who made the arrest had not actually seen anyone operating the machine.

The supreme court, however, reversed the appellate court and upheld the conviction, holding that the fact that it was openly displayed and in working order was sufficient evidence to obtain a conviction.

President Warns; Asks For Blood

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—President Truman warned Russia today that the Western Allies will continue to arm as long as "the forces of aggression are attacking the United Nations."

Mr. Truman also expressed hope that the Kremlin soon will reverse its "utterly foolish" course of opposing "the united will of all the other peoples of the world for peace and justice."

Speaking on United Nations Day—the UN charter became effective six years ago today—Mr. Truman delivered his remarks at cornerstone-laying ceremonies for the new District of Columbia Red Cross building.

He coupled his stern warning with an appeal for more blood for troops in Korea and voiced the belief that present strides in achieving world peace and freedom will justify "all the sacrifice and effort which they are costing us and other nations."

IN HIS FIRST foreign policy statement since the White House announced Monday that Russia had set off a third atomic explosion, the President said:

"I hope the time will not be far distant when the leaders of the Soviet Union and their satellites will come to see that it is utterly foolish to oppose the united will of all the other peoples of the world for peace and justice."

"But so long as the forces of aggression are attacking the United Nations, there must be no weakening of our efforts to check aggression and to build up the defense of the free world."

MILLER MAY UPSET CURRENT PRACTICE

Drunk Driving Cases Get New Study By Local Mayor

The problem of whether to send drunken driving cases to Pickaway County common pleas court or try them in his own court was being pondered Wednesday by Mayor Thurman I. Miller.

The problem sprang into existence Tuesday after Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff ordered a case against John Minor returned to mayor's court. Minor is accused of drunken driving in an affidavit filed by County Prosecutor Guy Cline.

The judge made the ruling following the hearing of a motion filed by the defendant asking that the case be struck from the files and remanded to the mayor's court.

The motion claims that when the case was before the mayor originally, on Aug. 4, the defendant waived the right to trial by jury and submitted the cause to the mayor for final determination.

The motion contends that this gave the mayor sole and final jurisdiction.

Local attorneys disagree on this point, saying that state statute stipulates the mayor may send a drunk driving case to the higher common pleas court under any circumstances.

If heard in common pleas court, a driving license may be suspended. Courts such as the mayor's or a justice of the peace is permitted to levy go suspension, thus giving a defendant "a slap on the wrist," lawmen say. For the last year, drunken driving cases here have been handled by the higher court and observers contend the suspension penalty has had a definite effect on cutting down on the number of drunk drivers in this county.

An affidavit by Mayor Miller was filed in which the mayor states the Minor case was sent from Miller's court to common pleas on previous "instructions" from Cline for the handling of drunken driving cases.

Cline has explained he gave no "instructions," but that during a meeting more than a year ago of county mayors and justices of the peace he suggested they follow the

Panmunjom Is Site For New Conference

MUNSAN, Oct. 25—(Thursday)—Top Allied and Communist armistice negotiators meet at Panmunjom today for the first time in more than two months to revive the Korean truce talks.

The negotiations, broken off by the Communists, will resume in a tent in the neutral village, half-way between the United Nations truce camp in Munsan and the Red headquarters in Kaesong, old site of the talks.

The lengthy preliminary negotiations between liaison officers of both sides were concluded yesterday when Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy of the UN truce delegation accepted a Red proposal for the initial full dress meeting to start at 11 a. m. today (9 p. m. Wednesday EST).

The Communists proposed the starting time when they delivered to UN liaison officers Gen. Nam II's ratification of the "ground rule" agreement signed two days ago by the Allies.

The Communists suspended the cease-fire talks Aug. 23 over the question of alleged Allied violations of the Kaesong neutral zone. The recent liaison meetings have set forth rules and regulations for the neutrality of the new meeting place of Panmunjom as well as Kaesong and the UN camp at Munsan.

RATIFICATION of the rules by the Reds immediately set in motion the mechanics for Thursday's meeting of truce delegations.

Nine UN command trucks left the Munsan base camp with equipment and men to set up the "tent city" that the UN personnel will use at Panmunjom.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols, UN command spokesman, said the small detachment of UN military police officers and men, commanded by Lt. Howard Hoppus of Warsaw, Ind., probably will take their stations in Panmunjom this afternoon.

Under the "ground rule" agreement on conditions and regulations for the truce talks each side has been authorized to station

More Dogfights Rage In North Korean Skies

KOREA, Oct. 25—(Thursday)—Air battles involving more than 200 planes for the second straight day broke out over North Korea yesterday and Allied fighters shot up two more Russian-built jets.

The UN pilots ran their two-day score to 22 Red jets destroyed or damaged as the enemy sent out more than 150 Mig-15s in an attempt to break up B-29 bombing raids.

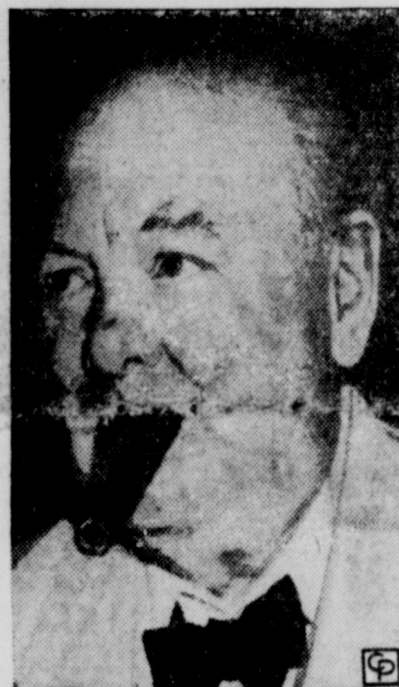

One American Sabrejet was shot down and the pilot lost in the first of three separate encounters. In the first engagement near Sinanju 35 American Sabrejets took on 70 Red jets and shot down one.

The second encounter occurred as B-29s, moving in on a key enemy railroad center, were attacked by 35 Mig-15s. Sixteen British two-jet fighters fought off the enemy attackers and reported probably destroying one of them.

In a later clash nine American thunderjets battled with 50 Mig-15s, but no damage was reported to either side.

Taft-Backers Lash 'Ike' For Failure To Label Self

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was under fire from one of Sen. Robert Taft's aides today for his failure to claim Republican allegiance when he registered to vote in 1949 and 1950.

John D. M. Hamilton, named by the Ohio senator to aid in his campaign for the 1952 GOP presidential nomination, criticized Eisenhower for registering in New York City and refusing to designate himself as a Republican.

Sen. Lodge, (R) Mass., defended Eisenhower's silence on party allegiance by pointing out on a television broadcast last night that for most of his career "Ike" has been an Army officer on active duty.

Hamilton contended, however, that Eisenhower was a civilian in 1948, 1949 and 1950 and that he "never raised his voice" for the GOP candidates in New York.

HAMILTON declared that "I very seriously think any Republican should have stood for John Foster Dulles against Herbert Lehman in 1949" in the New York senatorial race.

Sweden Mourns Death Of Prince

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 24—The Swedish court began six weeks of mourning today for Prince Carl, brother of the late King Gustav V, and known as "Europe's father-in-law."

The 90-year-old prince died last night of a heart disorder. His wife, Princess Ingeborg, and his eldest daughter, Princess Margaretha of Denmark, were at his bedside.

Prince Carl won his title of "Europe's father-in-law" through the prominent marriages of his three daughters. In addition to Margaretha, one daughter became the late Queen Astrid of Belgium and the third is Crown Princess Maerta of Norway.

'Guerrillas' Rile Egypt

Fuel Shipment Ban Is Lifted

CAIRO, Oct. 24—Egyptian contractors working for British forces in the tense Suez Canal Zone were threatened with death today if they fulfilled their contracts.

The warnings were contained in leaflets which are believed to have been distributed by a secret, extremist resistance movement planning to wage "guerrilla" warfare against the British.

A ban on the shipment of gasoline between Suez and Cairo, imposed only 24 hours earlier, was lifted by the British without comment today.

A British naval communiqué said the royal navy is issuing clearance certificates to British ships carrying supplies to canal zone troops because Egyptian authorities refused to issue the papers.

Meanwhile, an official source in Cairo denied reports that the council of ministers has decided to conclude a friendship and non-aggression pact with Russia.

Poison Liquor Brings Death To 28 In Atlanta

ATLANTA, Oct. 24—Sudden death from racing-motor fuel sold as moonshine liquor claimed a total of 28 lives and spread hysteria through sections of Atlanta today.

Police issued a grim warning to all citizens to avoid illegal liquor as they reported the arrest of 12 persons in connection with the wave of death and sickness.

Grady hospital estimated that it had treated "between 150 and 200" persons since Monday for the sickness brought on by the liquor. Doctors said however that "plain hysteria" had gripped some of those who streamed in for treatment.

One doctor said:

"It seems that every person who has had a drink of corn liquor for the last week thinks he is going blind."

Police said they feared the methanol-mixture was distributed widely in the city. One man, who admitted buying 62 gallons of illegal liquor for resale, said that when he found his customers were falling ill, he gathered up 37 unsold gallons and returned it to the original seller.

Police said they found the seller promptly sold the poisoned liquor in another section of Atlanta.

Cost Of War: 92,997 Casualties

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—The Defense Department today announced an increase of 2,062 in American casualties in Korea to bring the total since the start of the war to 92,997.

It was the fifth straight week that high casualties were reported as a result of the resumption of heavy fighting when peace talks sagged.

The new total includes 13,985 killed in action, 66,535 wounded, of whom 1,525 have died, and 12,477 missing, of whom 178 are known to have died.

More Effective Curbs On Meat Planned By OPS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—Price Stabilizer Michael DiSalle declared emphatically today that the Office of Price Stabilization will not de-control beef and announced new plans for more effective curbs on meat prices.

DiSalle said three new control methods are being considered to make ceilings on beef prices "more easily enforceable and to correct some distortions in marketing practice."

Meanwhile, OPS officials denied a report that retail beef prices will rise five percent by Christmas. They said the Capehart amendment in the amended controls law may cause some increases, but not of that amount. DiSalle said:

"Since Congress adjourned without restoring the authority to OPS to allocated available cattle for slaughtering among various registered packers, I have been asked

Trial Operation Is Held On Atom Test Grounds

LAS VEGAS, Oct. 24—A trial operation involving non-atomic high explosives only was held today over the Nevada test site 65 miles northwest of Las Vegas to test communications and other phases of history's first atomic war games.

In a two-statement statement released to newsmen by the Atomic Energy Commission public information office, AEC said:

"Third Corps tactical troops participated in the initial rehearsal for the operation."

"A trial operation, involving high explosives only was held to test communications and other phases of the operation."

An estimated half dozen B-29 bombers began flying in the area shortly before 9 a. m. (EST) on what appeared to be irregular flight patterns.

The huge bombers flew west, northwest and northeast of Las Vegas among long stretching clouds. The planes made wide swooping circles and made many passes over the test area.

AEC officials would not elaborate on the operation today except to say that it was a vital integral part of the war games.

ALBANIA SAYS 13 SPIES ANNIHILATED

LONDON, Oct. 24—Communist Albania alleged today that 13 spies, reportedly parachuted into the country from American-made planes based in Greece, have been "annihilated."

The communique said the agents carried American radio transmitters and German weapons and wore British clothes.

Local Schools Due To Be Shut All Day Friday

All schools in Pickaway County will be closed Friday while the teachers attend the 80th annual Central Ohio Teachers' Association meeting in Columbus.

All teachers in the Circleville area are expected to attend the annual session, which has a membership of 9,000.

In addition to the schools closing, the office of the county superintendent in Pickaway Courthouse will be closed for the day.

The superintendent's office will be closed to permit Secretaries Miss Dorothy Glick and Miss Doris Spangler to attend the annual School Secretaries' Association meeting to be held in Marion.

The motion claims that when the case was before the mayor originally, on Aug. 4, the defendant waived the right to trial by jury and submitted the cause to the mayor for final determination.

The motion contends that this gave the mayor sole and final jurisdiction.

Local attorneys disagree on this point, saying that state statute stipulates the mayor may send a drunk driving case to the higher common pleas court under any circumstances.

If heard in common pleas court, a driving license may be suspended. Courts such as the mayor's or a justice of the peace is permitted to levy no suspension, thus giving a defendant "a slap on the wrist," lawmen say.

For the last year, drunken driving cases here have been handled by the higher court and observers contend the suspension penalty has had a definite effect on cutting down on the number of drunk drivers in this county.

An affidavit by Mayor Miller was filed in which the mayor states the Minor case was sent from Miller's court to common pleas on previous "instructions" from Cline for the handling of drunken driving cases.

Cline has explained he gave no "instructions," but that during a meeting more than a year ago of county mayors and justices of the peace he suggested they follow the (Continued on Page Two)

'Guerrillas' Rile Egypt Fuel Shipment Ban Is Lifted

CAIRO, Oct. 24—Egyptian contractors working for British forces in the tense Suez Canal Zone were threatened with death today if they fulfilled their contracts.

The warnings were contained in leaflets which are believed to have been distributed by a secret, extremist resistance movement planning to wage "guerrilla" warfare against the British.

A ban on the shipment of gasoline between Suez and Cairo, imposed only 24 hours earlier, was lifted by the British without comment today.

A British naval communiqué said the royal navy is issuing clearance certificates to British ships carrying supplies to canal zone troops because Egyptian authorities refused to issue the papers.

Meanwhile, an official source in Cairo denied reports that the council of ministers has decided to conclude a friendship and non-aggression pact with Russia.

SEVERAL GROUPS have been urging the Cairo government to look to the Communist world for allies in the current difficulties with Britain and as a weapon to be used against the entire Western world.

Both Egyptians and police remained on the alert for further demonstrations which have been banned by the Cairo government.

An anti-Western demonstration in Alexandria was quelled only after one rioter was killed and four seriously wounded. Riots in Cairo resulted in about 40 casualties.

Egypt's interior ministry denounced demonstrators as "traitors" who threatened public security and threatened to deal with them with the "utmost severity."

Cost Of War: 92,997 Casualties

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—The Defense Department today announced an increase of 2,062 in American casualties in Korea to bring the total since the start of the war to 92,997.

It was the fifth straight week that high casualties were reported as a result of the resumption of heavy fighting when peace talks sagged.

The new total includes 13,985 killed in action, 66,535 wounded, of whom 1,525 have died, and 12,477 missing, of whom 178 are known to have died.

An estimated half dozen B-29 bombers began flying in the area shortly before 9 a. m. (EST) on what appeared to be irregular flight patterns.

The huge bombers flew west, northwest and northeast of Las Vegas among long stretching clouds. The planes made wide swooping circles and made many passes over the test area.

AEC officials would not elaborate on the operation today except to say that it was a vital integral part of the war games.

Albania Says 13 Spies Annihilated

LONDON, Oct. 24—Communist Albania alleged today that 13 spies, reportedly parachuted into the country from American-made planes based in Greece, have been "annihilated."

The charge was made in an Albanian news agency dispatch received in London which quoted a communique from the ministry of interior.

The communique said the agents carried American radio transmitters and German weapons and wore British clothes.

Panmunjom Is Site For New Conference

MUNSAN, Oct. 25—(Thursday)—Top Allied and Communist armistice negotiators meet at Panmunjom today for the first time in more than two months to revive the Korean truce talks.

The negotiations, broken off by the Communists, will resume in a tent in the neutral village, halfway between the United Nations truce camp in Munsan and the Red headquarters in Kaesong, old site of the talks.

The lengthy preliminary negotiations between liaison officers of both sides were concluded yesterday when Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy of the UN truce delegation accepted a Red proposal for the initial full dress meeting to start at 11 a. m. today (9 p. m. Wednesday EST).

The Communists proposed the starting time when they delivered to UN liaison officers Gen. Nam Il's ratification of the "ground rule" agreement signed two days ago by the Allies.

The Communists suspended the cease-fire talks Aug. 23 over the question of alleged Allied violations of the Kaesong neutral zone. The recent liaison meetings have set forth rules and regulations for the neutrality of the new meeting place of Panmunjom as well as Kaesong and the UN camp at Munsan.

RATIFICATION of the rules by the Reds immediately set in motion the mechanics for Thursday's meeting of truce delegations.

Nine UN command trucks left the Munsan base camp with equipment and men to set up the "tent city" that the UN personnel will use at Panmunjom.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols, UN command spokesman, said the small detachment of UN military police officers and men, commanded by Lt. Howard Hoppus of Warsaw, Ind., probably will take their stations in Panmunjom this afternoon.

Under the "ground rule" agreement on conditions and regulations for the truce talks each side has been authorized to station (Continued on Page Two)

More Dogfights Rage In North Korean Skies

KOREA, Oct. 25—(Thursday)—Air battles involving more than 200 planes for the second straight day broke out over North Korea yesterday and Allied fighters shot up two more Russian-built jets.

The UN pilots ran their two-day score to 22 Red jets destroyed or damaged as the enemy sent out more than 150 Mig-15s in an attempt to break up B-29 bombing raids.

One American Sabrejet was shot down and the pilot lost in the first of three separate encounters.

In the first engagement near Sinanju 35 American Sabrejets took on 70 Red jets and shot down one.

The second encounter occurred as B-29s, moving in on a key enemy railroad center, were attacked by 35 Migs. Sixteen British two-jet fighters fought off the enemy attackers and reported probably destroying one of them.

In a later clash nine American thunderjets battled with 50 Migs, but no damage was reported to either side.

Relief Rolls To Be Bared

COLUMBUS, Oct. 24—Ohio's relief rolls may soon be available for "general public inspection" in compliance with the new federal tax bill which authorizes such steps by state governments.

Governor Lausche said yesterday regarding the impending action: "While we will not make any special effort to publicize the rolls, Director Lamneck, when he returns (from Biloxi, Miss.), undoubtedly will make available for general inspection the welfare rolls."

Some states have thrown open their relief rolls to public inspection as a result of the new tax bill. Previously, however, these rolls were secret by federal regulation.

Man Is Placed On Probation

L. M. Hosler, 61, of Mt. Sterling Route 1, has been placed on probation for three years by Judge William D. Radcliff in Pickaway County common pleas court.

Hosler pleaded guilty to two indictments for writing checks with insufficient funds. Terms of the probation are that he violate no laws, have no checking account nor any check in his possession, report in writing to the prosecuting attorney once a month and pay the costs of prosecution.

Mayor Eyes Drunk Cases

new procedure so that the high court could levy a heavier penalty.

At that time, Cline was promised cooperation from all the lower courts—including Miller's.

The mayor's affidavit further states that when the defendant was bound over to the grand jury, the transcript did not state that in the mayor's opinion "it will be in the interests of the public good for the defendant to be bound over to the grand jury."

"Nor," the affidavit continues, "did said language appear on the criminal docket of said mayor's court at that time for the reason that I, as said mayor, had not then, nor have I since, made such a finding."

The mayor states that on Oct. 1 Cline's secretary appeared in his office and handed him a typewritten form containing the statement concerning binding the man over in the interests of public good, then used his typewriter to type it into the transcript. The transcript had already been filed in common pleas court.

The affidavit states that he was then "told" he was to "immediately" write into the mayor's court criminal docket exactly the same language "as that which the secretary had copied into the transcript. The mayor's affidavit claims that at no time did he make any such finding."

The mayor said Wednesday that he intended to give "considerable thought" to whether drunken driving cases will be tried in his court or sent over to common pleas from now on.

The mayor tried one such case Wednesday morning. He fined Edward Smith, 56, of Circleville Route 1, $100 and costs after the man pleaded guilty to drunken driving.

He was arrested at 6:35 p. m. Tuesday on Route 23 by State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells.

Concerning the hearing of future drunken driving cases, the mayor said a great deal would "depend on the individual."

He explained that when a case came before him in which he knew the defendant's background, he could see no reason why the case should not be handled in his court.

"But this whole business has got to be given careful study," Miller added. "I don't think I'm going to write into the transcripts that finding about it being in the public interest to bind the defendants over."

He said that he intended to talk the matter over with Pickaway County Bar Association at one of its future meetings.

"But that won't be until after the election," he added. "I won't have time before then. In any case, I'll know what I'm going to do by the first of the year."

General Motors Loses Lawsuit

COLUMBUS, Oct. 24—State revocation and withholding of licenses issued to General Motors Corp. auto dealers for the sale of insurance has been ruled constitutional.

The court of appeals upheld the action in a decision handed down yesterday.

The suit was brought by the Motors Insurance Corp. of New York and a number of their agents in Ohio, and Robert L. Moulton, the then director of commerce.

It sought to restrain license revocations on the grounds of unconstitutional acts, holding misapplication of the Ohio code.

Vanilla Listed As Favorite Ice Cream Flavor

DETROIT, Oct. 24—In ice cream, it's still vanilla—2 to 1.

That's the finding of the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers convention meeting in Detroit to mark the 100th anniversary of wholesale ice cream manufacture.

The association released figures showing that vanilla tops the ice cream consumption list by far. Exactly 45.41 percent of all ice cream sold is vanilla, with chocolate running a poor second at 17.25 percent. Strawberry is third with 9.16 percent.

Back in 1851 a Baltimore benefactor of humanity named Jacob Fussell turned ice cream from a rich man's luxury to a delicacy within the reach of every purse.

Since 1901 the ice cream industry, aided by increasingly modern methods, has increased its production over 100 times. Most recent figures at the convention show that in 1949 the per capita consumption of ice cream was 15.17 quarts.

That's a far cry from the day 300 years ago when King Charles I of England tasted ice cream for the first time and was so captivated that he pensioned the inventor with a substantial sum so that the delicacy would be reserved for the royal table.

However, the peak year nationally for ice cream was 1946, when each person in the U.S. downed some 20.51 quarts.

Favorite Czech Movie Actress Fails To Escape

FRANKFURT, Oct. 24—Czechoslovakia's favorite movie actress—blonde, svelte Jirina Stepanikova—may be due for a quick "fade-out."

She reportedly was caught trying to flee her Communist homeland.

The only member of a party of five who made good his escape told Radio Free Europe that Miss Stepanikova, her three-year-old son and three friends tried to escape.

They were said to have been spotted in "no man's land," near the international highway at Rosshaupt.

Czech border police reportedly chased the party, firing shots into the air.

They allegedly crossed into German territory to nab their quarry and captured all but one of the refugees.

The escapee said he last saw Miss Stepanikova being dragged back to Czechoslovakia, kicking and screaming as she went.

Logan Bakery Truck Driver Hurt In Wreck

A Logan bakery truck driver received minor injuries early Wednesday when his truck and a refrigerator truck collided head-on in a covered bridge just north of Adelphi.

The mishap happened at about 9:05 a. m. Wednesday involving trucks operated by Harold Coleman, 27, of Chillicothe, and Raymond Wyckoff, 19, of Logan.

Wyckoff suffered chest injuries and head bruises in the smashup which demolished his bread truck. Coleman was unhurt, although his truck suffered extensive damage.

State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells said Wyckoff is to appear in Circleville Friday night on an accusation of failing to yield the right of way in the one-way bridge.

'Jet' Blowing Auto Brings Arrest Of Man

A 28-year-old Ashville man was fined $50 and costs Tuesday for operating a novelty gadget on his auto's exhaust pipe.

He is Chester McCain, arrested on Route 23 after a jet-like apparatus on his auto's exhaust pipe was spotted by State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells.

The accusation against McCain was filed in the court of Ashville Mayor Elmer Malone "for having a device on the exhaust which causes dangerous gases to be emitted."

Wells said the man had equipped his exhaust pipe with a spark plug, a coil and a wire leading to a switch inside. After getting raw gas into the pipe from the engine the spark was made to blow a six-foot flame behind the car.

"We have been given orders to arrest anyone operating such devices," Wells said. He said the order stemmed from an injury suffered from one of the devices in Columbus recently.

National Guard Men Are Used In Army Rotation

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—Brig. Gen. D. M. McFadyen declared today that the Army must continue to take individual soldiers and officers from National Guard units in order to fulfill its rotation plan.

McFadyen, Army deputy chief of staff for personnel, made his statement to the annual convention of the National Guard Association which has charged that the Army is "stripping" Guard units. He said:

"We have been and still are rotating an entire field Army out of active combat in Korea on an individual man-for-man basis."

"The support of all overseas forces for combat personnel falls upon combat units here in the United States. In the ensuing months there must continue to be levies on units to keep the rotation moving."

Senator Lashes Russia's Stand

BROWNWOOD, Tex., Oct. 24—Sen. Johnson (D) Tex., declared today that "it is foolish to talk of avoiding war—we are already in a war, a major war."

"The war in Korea is a war of Soviet Russia. It was started by Russia. It has been directed by Russia. The truce talks can get down to business only when they are moved to the Kremlin."

the freedom of the world in Korea."

He pointed out that whole blood has prevented thousands of deaths. In one instance, he said, a soldier, who would have died several years ago, was saved by 75 pints of blood.

As an indication of Allied unity in Korea, Mr. Truman recalled his meeting at the White House with 43 soldiers who represented each of the 19 participant nations. He said:

"THEY ARE evidence that the idea of international justice under law—the idea of international cooperation to preserve peace and freedom—has taken root and is growing and spreading throughout the world, bringing them together in new and greater bonds of brotherhood."

The President said that human progress, the attainment of justice and freedom in the U. S. and the independence of other nations have "cost human lives and painful effort." But, he added:

"I believe with all my heart that the great advances which we are making today in setting up a system of international peace and justice will prove to be worth all the sacrifice and effort which they are costing us and other nations."

Sharp Increase Noted Here In Idle Pay Claims

A sharp increase in new claims for unemployment compensation was noted in Pickaway County last week.

C. C. Thomas, local Bureau of Unemployment Compensation manager, said new claims rose from 14 the week before last to 169 last week.

The jump resulted from a one-week shutdown of Circleville's General Electric lamp works. The plant was closed to permit an "inventory adjustment," and brought about a temporary layoff of employees. Work was resumed this week.

Thomas said that continued claims last week rose to 39 from 32 for the week before last.

Throughout the state new claims dropped from 7,928 to 7,512, while continued claims increased from 30,387 to 33,468.

Physical Ed Building Plans Are Given OK

Circleville board of education Tuesday met in special session to give approval to the final plans and specifications for its proposed new $475,000 physical education plant.

The board met with Architect F. F. Glass of Columbus for the final review of plans. Work has been continuing on the plans for the building nearly one year.

However, although the board has given final approval to the plans it probably will not advertise for contract bidding until late this year or early 1952, it then.

Board President Carl Leist said the panel will not begin advertising for bids on the new structure until approval is received from the National Production Authority.

The board was informed earlier by the government that this year's building allotments have been filled, giving no hope that the local plant may receive building approval until the first quarter of 1952.

Architect Glass failed to make an estimate of cost based on the plans which were approved Tuesday.

Steel Scrap Ceiling Prices Being Revised

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—The government has revised ceiling prices for iron and steel scrap in an effort to expedite collection of those defense-vital materials.

The Office of Price Stabilization encouraged sales of steel scrap by farmers, householders, auto wreckers, peddlers and others by hiking the ceiling on such metal $2 a ton. OPS also raised the ceiling of number two bundles which includes such scrap by like amount.

Ceilings of other grades of scrap were both raised and lowered. OPS said "considered as a whole, these price changes are not expected to change appreciably the overall general level of ceiling prices for iron and steel scrap."

The Reds were adamant in their demand for a buffer zone straddling Parallel 38, the artificial political border between the Communist North and the Republic of Korea.

Relief Rolls To Be Bared

COLUMBUS, Oct. 24—Ohio's relief rolls may soon be available for "general public inspection" in compliance with the new federal tax bill which authorizes such steps by state governments.

Governor Lausche said yesterday regarding the impending action: "While we will not make any special effort to publicize the rolls, Director Lamneck, when he returns (from Biloxi, Miss.), undoubtedly will make available for general inspection the welfare rolls."

Some states have thrown open their relief rolls to public inspection as a result of the new tax bill. Previously, however, these rolls were secret by federal regulation.

Mayor Eyes Drunk Cases

new procedure so that the high court could levy a heavier penalty.

At that time, Cline was promised cooperation from all the lower courts—including Miller's.

The mayor's affidavit further states that when the defendant was bound over to the grand jury, the transcript did not state that in the mayor's opinion "it will be in the interests of the public good for the defendant to be bound over to the grand jury."

"Nor," the affidavit continues, "did said language appear on the criminal docket of said mayor's court at that time for the reason that I, as said mayor, had not then, nor have I since, made such a finding."

The mayor states that on Oct. 1 Cline's secretary appeared in his office and handed him a typewritten form containing the statement concerning binding the man over in the interests of public good, then used his typewriter to type it into the transcript. The transcript had already been filed in common pleas court.

The affidavit states that he was then "told" he was to "immediately" write into the mayor's court criminal docket exactly the same language as that which the secretary had copied into the transcript. The mayor's affidavit claims that at no time did he make any such finding.

The mayor said Wednesday that he intended to give "considerable thought" to whether drunken driving cases will be tried in his court or sent over to common pleas from now on.

The mayor tried one such case Wednesday morning. He fined Edward Smith, 56, of Circleville Route 1, $100 and costs after the man pleaded guilty to drunken driving. He was arrested at 6:35 p. m. Tuesday on Route 23 by State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells.

Concerning the hearing of future drunken driving cases, the mayor said a great deal would "depend on the individual."

He explained that when a case came before him in which he knew the defendant's background, he could see no reason why the case should not be handled in his court.

"But this whole business has got to be given careful study," Miller added. "I don't think I'm going to write into the transcripts that finding about it being in the public interest to bind the defendants over."

He said that he intended to talk the matter over with Pickaway County Bar Association at one of its future meetings.

"But that won't be until after the election," he added. "I won't have time before then. In any case, I'll know what I'm going to do by the first of the year."

General Motors Loses Lawsuit

COLUMBUS, Oct. 24—State revocation and withholding of licenses issued to General Motors Corp. auto dealers for the sale of insurance has been ruled constitutional. The court of appeals upheld the action in a decision handed down yesterday.

The suit was brought by the Motors Insurance Corp. of New York and a number of their agents in Ohio, and Robert L. Moulton, then director of commerce.

It sought to restrain license revocations on the grounds of unconstitutional acts, holding misapplication of the Ohio code.

Vanilla Listed As Favorite Ice Cream Flavor

DETROIT, Oct. 24—In ice cream, it's still vanilla—2 to 1. That's the finding of the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers convention meeting in Detroit to mark the 100th anniversary of wholesale ice cream manufacture.

The association released figures showing that vanilla tops the ice cream consumption list by far. Exactly 45.41 percent of all ice cream sold is vanilla, with chocolate running a poor second at 17.25 percent. Strawberry is third with 9.16 percent.

Back in 1851 a Baltimore benefactor of humanity named Jacob Fussell turned ice cream from a rich man's luxury to a delicacy within the reach of every purse.

Since 1901 the ice cream industry, aided by increasingly modern methods, has increased its production over 100 times. Most recent figures at the convention show that in 1949 the per capita consumption of ice cream was 15.17 quarts.

That's a far cry from the day 300 years ago when King Charles I of England tasted ice cream for the first time and was so captivated that he pensioned the inventor with a substantial sum so that the delicacy would be reserved for the royal table.

However, the peak year nationally for ice cream was 1946, when each person in the U.S. downed some 20.51 quarts.

Favorite Czech Movie Actress Fails To Escape

FRANKFURT, Oct. 24—Czechoslovakia's favorite movie actress—blonde, sveite Jirina Stepanicova—may be due for a quick "fade-out." She reportedly was caught trying to flee her Communist homeland.

The only member of a party of five who made good his escape told Radio Free Europe that Miss Stepanicova, her three-year-old son and three friends tried to escape.

They were said to have been spotted in "no man's land," near the international highway at Rosshaupt.

Czech border police reportedly chased the party, firing shots into the air.

They allegedly crossed into German territory to nab their quarry and captured all but one of the refugees.

The escapee said he last saw Miss Stepanicova being dragged back to Czechoslovakia, kicking and screaming as she went.

Logan Bakery Truck Driver Hurt In Wreck

A Logan bakery truck driver received minor injuries early Wednesday when his truck and a refrigerator truck collided head-on in a covered bridge just north of Adelphi.

The mishap happened at about 9:05 a. m. Wednesday involving trucks operated by Harold Coleman, 27, of Chillicothe, and Raymond Wyckoff, 19, of Logan.

Wyckoff suffered chest injuries and head bruises in the smashup which demolished his bread truck. Coleman was unhurt, although his truck suffered extensive damage.

State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells said Wyckoff is to appear in Circleville Friday night on an accusation of failing to yield the right of way in the one-way bridge.

'Jet' Blowing Auto Brings Arrest Of Man

A 28-year-old Ashville man was fined $50 and costs Tuesday for operating a novelty gadget on his auto's exhaust pipe.

He is Chester McCain, arrested on Route 23 after a jet-like apparatus on his auto's exhaust pipe was spotted by State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells.

The accusation against McCain was filed in the court of Ashville Mayor Elmer Malone "for having a device on the exhaust which causes dangerous gases to be emitted."

Wells said the man had equipped his exhaust pipe with a spark plug, a coil and a wire leading to a switch inside. After getting raw gas into the pipe from the engine the spark was made to blow a six-foot flame behind the car.

"We have been given orders to arrest anyone operating such devices," Wells said. He said the order stemmed from an injury suffered from one of the devices in Columbus recently.

National Guard Men Are Used In Army Rotation

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—Brig. Gen. D. M. McFadyen declared today that the Army must continue to take individual soldiers and officers from National Guard units in order to fulfill its rotation plan.

McFadyen, Army deputy chief of staff for personnel, made his statement to the annual convention of the National Guard Association which has charged that the Army is "stripping" Guard units. He said:

"We have been and still are rotating an entire field Army out of active combat in Korea on an individual man-for-man basis.

"The support of all overseas forces for combat personnel falls upon combat units here in the United States. In the ensuing months there must continue to be levies on units to keep the rotation moving."

Senator Lashes Russia's Stand

BROWNWOOD, Tex., Oct. 24—Sen. Johnson (D) Tex., declared today that "it is foolish to talk of avoiding war—we are already in a war, a major war." He said:

"The war in Korea is a war of Soviet Russia. It was started by Russia. It has been directed by Russia. The true talks can get down to business only when they are moved to the Kremlin."

the freedom of the world in Korea.

He pointed out that whole blood has prevented thousands of deaths. In one instance, he said, a soldier, who would have died several years ago, was saved by 75 pints of blood.

As an indication of Allied unity in Korea, Mr. Truman recalled his meeting at the White House with 48 soldiers who represented each of the 19 participating nations. He said:

"THEY ARE evidence that the idea of international justice under law—the idea of international co-operation to preserve peace and freedom—has taken root and is growing and spreading throughout the world, bringing them together in new and greater bonds of brotherhood."

The President said that human progress, the attainment of justice and freedom in the U. S. and the independence of other nations have "cost human lives and painful effort." But, he added:

"I believe with all my heart that the great advances which we are making today in setting up a system of international peace and justice will prove to be worth all the sacrifice and effort which they are costing us and other nations."

Sharp Increase Noted Here In Idle Pay Claims

A sharp increase in new claims for unemployment compensation was noted in Pickaway County last week.

C. C. Thomas, local Bureau of Unemployment Compensation manager, said new claims rose from 14 the week before last to 169 last week.

The jump resulted from a one-week shutdown of Circleville's General Electric lamp works. The plant was closed to permit an "inventory adjustment," and brought about a temporary layoff of employees. Work was resumed this week.

Thomas said that continued claims last week rose to 39 from 32 for the week before last.

Throughout the state new claims dropped from 7,928 to 7,512, while continued claims increased from 30,387 to 33,468.

Physical Ed Building Plans Are Given OK

Circleville board of education Tuesday met in special session to give approval to the final plans and specifications for its proposed new $475,000 physical education plant.

The board met with Architect F. F. Glass of Columbus for the final review of plans. Work has been continuing on the plans for the building nearly one year.

However, although the board has given final approval to the plans it probably will not advertise for contract bidding until late this year or early 1952, it then.

Board President Carl Leist said the panel will not begin advertising for bids on the new structure until approval is received from the National Production Authority.

The board was informed earlier by the government that this year's building allotments have been filled, giving no hope that the local plant may receive building approval until the first quarter of 1952.

Architect Glass failed to make an estimate of cost based on the plans which were approved Tuesday.

Steel Scrap Ceiling Prices Being Revised

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—The government has revised ceiling prices for iron and steel scrap in an effort to expedite collection of those defense-vital materials.

The Office of Price Stabilization encouraged sales of steel scrap by farmers, householders, auto wreckers, peddlers and others by hiking the ceiling on such metal $2 a ton. OPS also raised the ceiling of number two bundles which includes such scrap by like amount.

Ceilings of other grades of scrap were both raised and lowered. OPS said "considered as a whole, these price changes are not expected to change appreciably the overall general level of ceiling prices for iron and steel scrap."

LEADER GIVES VIEWS

Small Liberal Party Seen Holding Key To Britain

Editor's Note: Many seasoned political observers believe that the result of the British general election Thursday may be close and that neither the Conservatives nor Labor Party may have a commanding majority. In that case, the views of the small Liberal Party must be decisive. In the following article, Clement Davies, veteran leader of the Liberal Party, indicates how his party would act if it held the balance of power.

By CLEMENT DAVIES
Leader, British Liberal Party

LONDON, Oct. 24 — A strong group of Liberals in parliament will ensure two things.

First, that the measures taken by the government will have to be of a nature to command the support of all classes. If not we shall expose them. Secondly, that the steps needed to overcome the country's difficulties are taken by whichever party is in power.

For the problems confronting us are too serious to be solved in a partisan spirit, in the noisy clash between the rival interests of left and right.

THE NATION is in an alarming condition. I will pass over the staggering problems awaiting solution in the United Nations, in Western defense, in Korea, in Persia and elsewhere.

The central problem is to get ourselves into the moral and physical shape to stand up under our burdens.

The pound note steadily falls in value, prices rise to threaten our living standards and social services.

Neither of the other parties would, themselves, have the courage to advocate or carry through the severe but necessary measures.

It is one of the weaknesses of Democracy that parties seeking office will never tell the whole truth, where it might lose them votes.

This is where the Liberal Party has a vital part to play in parliament.

I will summarize the needs of the day.

We have to get more goods and services at less cost. It is as simple as that. The solution is not so simple. In the first place some things affecting prices lie beyond the influence of any single government, acting alone. For instance, the shortages in raw materials we have to buy abroad.

BUT IF THIS country would give a real lead in getting together with our overseas friends and stopping the scramble for scarce goods we could strangle some price booms before they hatch.

To get more goods and services we must give everybody engaged in industry, agriculture and commerce positive reasons for producing more. The motive of public service is, by itself, not enough. There must be concrete incentives.

Trade unions, which in their worst form are labor monopolies, must be given to understand that they have a responsibility to the community for increasing production.

Many of their restrictive practices, which like those of the employers' associations are really a body of private law within the state, must go the same way as the laws which restricted their liberty in the past.

Both parties are restrictionist. The Tories limited trade by tariffs, but they called it protection. They also began the restrictions on road haulage. The Socialists are equally restrictionist. They will not even allow Italians in coal mines. They prefer that we shiver this Winter.

The extravagance of government departments must be cut. We all can quote cases of our money being wasted. An obvious way to tackle this job would be to ensure, as Liberals have said for long, that proposals for spending tax money should be examined before it is spent and not, as now, afterwards.

No other government, except a Liberal one, could put through the full list of measures required for the health of this country. The other parties can be forced to put them through.

Official flower of the District of Columbia is the American Beauty rose.

Teen Tips

How many times have you girls wondered if your favorite date—your dream boy—means what he says to you? That's the problem on this high school girl's mind:

"I have been going with a boy two years and he has asked me to marry him. I'm 18 and he's 20."

"During this past year he has been going out with other girls, but he still goes with me also. I've never said much about it to him, and perhaps that's why he does go out with them—because he knows he can and I won't say anything. Perhaps he's just leading me on."

"What can I do to make him stop going with other girls?"

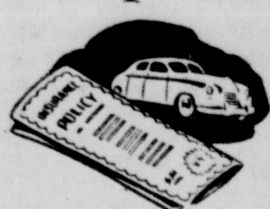

Ans.—Why don't you and your Romeo have a friendly little talk to straighten this out? Either you two are "going steady" or you're not. Whichever it is, it applies to both of you—not just to one of you. Avoid "nagging" about his other dates. Simply say that you wonder if you two are going steady or not so you can plan to act accordingly.

If he's serious about wanting to marry you, he'll skip other dates if you two agree on "going steady." If he doesn't want to give up other dates, he's certainly not ready to talk about marriage.

If this is the case, you'd be wise to "circulate," meet other boys and have dates with them—so you'll eventually meet one who means every word of his sweet talk and proves it by his actions.

Both parties are restrictionist. The Tories limited trade by tariffs, but they called it protection. They also began the restrictions on road haulage. The Socialists are equally restrictionist. They will not even allow Italians in coal mines. They prefer that we shiver this winter.

The extravagance of government departments must be cut. We all can quote cases of our money being wasted. An obvious way to tackle this job would be to ensure, as Liberals have said for long, that proposals for spending tax money should be examined before it is spent and not, as now, afterwards.

No other government, except a Liberal one, could put through the full list of measures required for the health of this country. The other parties can be forced to put them through.

defense, in Korea, in Persia and elsewhere.

The central problem is to get ourselves into the moral and physical shape to stand up under our burdens.

The pound note steadily falls in value, prices rise to threaten our living standards and social services.

Neither of the other parties would, themselves, have the courage to advocate or carry through the severe but necessary measures.

It is one of the weaknesses of Democracy that parties seeking office will never tell the whole truth, where it might lose them votes.

This is where the Liberal Party has a vital part to play in parliament.

I will summarize the needs of the day.

We have to get more goods and services at less cost. It is as simply stated as that. The solution is not so simple. In the first place some things affecting prices lie beyond the influence of any single government, acting alone: For instance, the shortages in raw materials we have to buy abroad.

BUT IF THIS country would give a real lead in getting together with our overseas friends and stopping the scramble for scarce

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

How many times have you girls wondered if your favorite date—your dream boy—means what he says to you? That's the problem on this high school girl's mind:

"I have been going with a boy two years and he has asked me to marry him. I'm 18 and he's 20.

"During this past year he has been going out with other girls, but he still goes with me also. I've never said much about it to him, and perhaps that's why he does go out with them—because he knows he can and I won't say anything. Perhaps he's just leading me on.

"What can I do to make him stop going with other girls?"

Ans.—Why don't you and your Romeo have a friendly little talk to straighten this out? Either you two are "going steady" or you're not. Whichever it is, it applies to both of you—not just to one of you. Avoid "nagging" about his other dates. Simply say that you wonder if you two are going steady or not so you can plan to act accordingly.

If he's serious about wanting to marry you, he'll skip other dates if you two agree on "going steady." If he doesn't want to give up other dates, he's certainly not ready to talk about marriage.

If this is the case, you'd be wise to "circulate," meet other boys and have dates with them—so you'll eventually meet one who means every word of his sweet talk and proves it by his actions.

FUZZY PROPHETS

FOR weather prophets commend us to the wholly-bear caterpillars—that is, if next Winter is a mild one. From early childhood many persons now adults have "known" that the ensuing Winter would be fairly easy on little hands, feet and ears, or would be stormy, blustery and cold.

It all hinged on whether the brown stripe in the middle of this familiar caterpillar, black at both ends, was wide or narrow. By Spring most youngsters had forgotten all about it.

New Jersey formerly had a whimsical character known as Caterpillar Bill who took the fuzzy creatures in good faith. He asserted that from 1913 to 1939, inclusive, their predictions were correct 26 years out of 27, but nobody else kept a check on what he "read" from the brown stripes.

Now Science, with a capital S, takes a hand. Dr. C. H. Curran, curator of insects and spiders at the American Museum of Natural History in New York City, is wondering, not asserting, whether these little creatures by their coloring do actually foretell the character of Winter. For three years they have been right. This year they would seem to indicate that the Winter will be mild—all 51 of them that Dr. Curran observed on a recent trip to Bear Mountain. He'll know more about it 10 years hence.

But just as one swallow doesn't make a Summer, so three coincidences in the insect world do not suffice for a general rule. Flick a half dollar and it may come down tails three times, but the odds are seven to one against it, though even at each flick.

MOUNTING HIGHWAY TOLL

OPEN highways and rural areas are the dark spots in the tragic picture of mounting traffic accidents. Data released by the National Safety Council are conclusive on this score. In the first eight months this year fatalities rose 7 per cent above the 1950 period for a total of 23,030. August's 3,560 road deaths were the highest for any August since 1941. This depressing record is lightened only by the fact that 14 states reported decreases ranging from 2 to 18 per cent.

In the current issue of Public Safety Ned H. Dearborn, the council's president, makes sharp comment about "public indifference" and "official apathy" while "the crazy highway fools are still piling up a shocking toll of dead and injured." But, he adds:

"Don't let any one tell you the traffic problem can't be licked. Some states and cities have done it. But it takes guts, energetic action and public support. And so far we haven't had enough of it."

Diplomacy is the art of turning an intolerable outrage into a regrettable incident.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

In spite of the mountain of disclosures of corruption in government, the largest number of public workers, federal, state and municipal, are fine citizens, poorly paid, who keep in motion the wheels of government. Most of them, in all parts of the country, are on one form of civil service or another.

I think, offhand, of the remarkable men in our national parks and forestry services whose devotion to the public good is not able and whose pay is shamefully small. Everybody knows his mailman of whom it can be said that he works hard to small advantage. These are public servants as much as the President of the United States or the Collector of Internal Revenue.

However, there are weaknesses in the structure of government in this country which need to be taken seriously and which will not be corrected by the passage of a code of morals by the Congress. The greatest of these is the cost of nomination and election, which places an elected public official often under deep obligations to individuals and groups. Such obligations are continuing, as elections come often. In Mark Hanna's day, many public officials were dependent upon corporations; today, many are dependent upon labor unions. Even the President of the United States, whoever he may be, is not free from such embarrassments.

Secondly, the pay of a public official is, with the exception of the President, ridiculously inadequate on all levels compared with pay for identical work in private life. For instance, the United States attorney for the southern district of New York, who conducts the largest law office in this city, perhaps in the world, receives $10,000 a year. For similar services, a private lawyer would not regard $100,000 a year too high.

What other compensation does such an official receive? Is it the honor and glory of public office? Is it the prospect of a continuing career in a great public service? A change of President could deprive him of his position; a new attorney general in the President's cabinet could do the same.

As I write this, I cannot help but think of the altogether improper attack on the United States attorney, Irving Saypol, by the judges of the U.S. Court of Appeals in the Remington case. Similarly, I recall how Judge Learned Hand attacked Saypol for wanting high bail and revocation of bail for Communists, wondering whether these Communists would run away after eight of them had already disappeared, four actually having jumped bail. The point I wish to make is that the dignity of position is not adequate to compensate for low pay.

The temptation for moral lapses increases as taxes and the high cost of living rise while pay stands still. These men find it more and more difficult to keep up the front that tenure in certain levels of public office requires. Or to put it on a lower level, a $4,000 a year policeman, who has to buy his own uniforms and revolvers, pay taxes and contribute to pension funds, etc., may look at a $100 tip all out of proportion. A $1,000 bribe becomes almost compelling.

This is not written to condone corruption; my object is to state the facts of an ugly situation.

Nor should exceptions be made of some to the disadvantage of others. A member of Congress who is a lawyer can with legitimacy and without public censure practice law and his law partner may practice before government departments and

Miss Doctor

SYNOPSIS
Most any girl would have snapped at a chance to marry eminent and elegant Dr. Nicholas Cowan, chief surgeon at Boone hospital, and Nobel prize winner in bone research. But when he asked his co-worker, Dr. Mollie Brooks, to marry him, she turned him down—flat. Nicholas was without "heart," she told herself, and she wanted no "heartless" husband. He was cruel not to help young Dr. Peter Shepherd, Boone's new resident surgeon, so urgently in need of safe advice.

CHAPTER TWO
COMING TO a full end, along Kingshighway, was Liz Ragsdale, wife of the Senior Resident at Children's; she greeted Mollie indifferently and swung on down the sidewalk to her apartment in Mrs. Wayne's house. Remembering excited gossip about the girl, Mollie looked curiously after Liz. Even Nicholas had said things about her. Did she love her husband? With him, was she gay and young and unrestrained? Was he with her? Mollie could not remember ever having seen young Dr. Ragsdale out of whites. What was he like away from the hospital, what was his personal life?

It seemed everyone had a personal life. Even Nicholas. Winning again at the hurt of the scene which he had precipitated—if he just hadn't!—Mollie spoke a mechanical greeting to the doorman. She went into the hall, to the water, took herself up to her fifth floor apartment.

Loosening her scarf, Mollie went down the three carpeted steps and lit the candelabra on the piano. Its glow twinkled in its own brightness and sparkled upon the crystal tree which Nicholas had given her. Tonight the exquisite beauty of the little tree hurt—as one is hurt by the sight of some closely intimate possession of a loved one suddenly lost. Mollie hung her coat away in the closet, crossed to the bathroom to wash her hands and comb her hair. She looked about her, a smile lifting the corners of her mouth. Roses were everywhere. On the curtains at the window, tiny ones upon the tiles around the mirror, huge ones painted upon the pink doors of the cabinets, and even splashed against the pink ceiling. Roses bloomed all over the place—

Mollie sobbed dryly. Oh, gone Nicholas! Why had he done what he had done this evening? Just at the minute when she was feeling snugly sure of herself, of the life she led, of the future... She swiftly crossed the apartment to the balcony where Hazel had left the table set for her; in the small, efficient kitchen were the materials for her dinner. It was Nicholas who had steered her away from a lone woman's proclivity to eat a sandwich—it was Nicholas who had guided every minute of her life as she now led it. He had not wanted her to say that he had trained her, but what else?

The Mollie Brooks who had first come to the city would certainly have eaten a sandwich and at the kitchen table! If she had made any kind of salad, it would have been three slices of tomato on a lettuce leaf, garnished by a dab of bottled mayonnaise. "And it wouldn't have been bad!" she said defiantly, rubbing garlic against the curve of the small wooden bowl.

Many people envied her the friendship there was between her and Nicholas. Because Nicholas was special. The son of an old family, the heir to great wealth, Nicholas had been raised in the best traditions of aristocracy. Good taste, discrimination, were as much a part of the man as the purely bred blood which ran in his veins. His integrity, his sense of honor, were as real as the bones of his compact body. Who's Who gave him age as forty, but that could have been an estimation. Nicholas himself was not age-conscious and being with him so much had taught Mollie not to be. Nicholas was beyond the callowness of youth, with none of the stoddiness attributed to middle age. What else mattered?

He worked extremely hard, but no one ever caught him at it. His closest friends never saw his laboratory, nor found him reading a thick medical book. He would talk professional shop to someone like Mollie, but without reference to himself or his own shop. He wanted outward stimulation from his friends, new interests, new aspects, and so he chose his friends carefully to provide those things.

He had a dozen ways by which he explained his study of medicine, but he never mentioned his passionate interest in bone growth and grafts. The interest was there, and it was intense. Mollie had only awarded the Nobel prize for his research in skeletal repair. Excitement and pride in their young doctor had burgeoned throughout the Group; talk about the award had sizzled and popped.

Mollie would always remember her first sight of the great Dr. Cowan after the announcement had been made. So calm did the man appear that she doubted at first that he could be the prize winner. It seemed incredible that a man could so casually wear such an honor. Not as if it didn't matter, but as if this doctor said, "I know that the work I was doing was worth while. If it hadn't been, I wouldn't have bothered."

And somehow his calmness, the quiet surety with which he continued his work on the technique of bone grafting, was more exciting than any visible display of greatness could possibly have been. People who did not know the man marveled at his serenity. Perhaps a few thought it a pose.

It was not, Nicholas had won the prize because he had been deeply interested in his work; he continued that work in the same fashion and for the same reason. Now he was a Staff surgeon of the great Boone Group of hospitals, had established and was directing its bone bank. He still lectured regularly at the medical school, and went off to lecture at other schools. But he did not do active surgery, and would do none. When questioned about this, he claimed that he possessed no bedside manner; he'd content himself with training men who were so blessed.

A time or two, some sentimentalist would venture to remind Dr. Cowan of his duty to humanity. "Nothing interests me less than my duty," he would say coldly. "And my single purpose is to avoid doing the things I should do." Mollie was sure that fastidiousness did not explain his refusal to "practice." She suspected his reason was a part of the manner in which he selected his friends. He never spoke of his family. The he seemed anxious to avoid was a betrayal of confidence if he allowed himself the luxury of too many friends or too close association with the hospital personnel and his patients. Somewhere in Nicholas' past there had been such a betrayal—Mollie was sure of that, though the subject had never been discussed between them. He had never married. He was an aloof, unapproachable man, too interested in people and their ways to be called self-centered, too alertly humorous to be called cold.

At any rate, strange man, lonely man or even genius, he was Mollie's friend, and had been for 10 years. Now, she straightened with amazement to realize that the years had been so many. Ten years ago, Mollie Brooks—called Mary then—had been a medical student, doing everything she could to cover the freckles which dusted her cheeks and nose, twisting her thick, tawny-colored hair into a prim knot at the back of her neck, wearing suits and shirts and ties as much like the men's as she could. What a girl, that hen medic! She had met Nicholas first when, as a senior medic, she had listened to the famous young surgeon lecture.

Nicholas had looked then just about as he did now. Mollie remembered so plainly. The lift of his head, the glint in his brown eyes, the expression about his mouth as he talked. His slow, certain way of presenting a case, his alert questions... That had been the first time he had spoken her name, calling her "Brooks" at first, then smiling in swift apology when she answered. He remembered when she named after that, as perhaps he did those of the men—but it seemed special to Mollie that he should speak to her by name whenever he passed her in the halls. And, of course, her fascination with this man increased, her appreciation of his calm, suave manner, the clever use of his hands.

At that time he was doing a good deal of work at the Group's labs, and he often came across the earnest Miss Brooks doing her anatomy or histology assignments. He fell into a way of standing at her shoulder, sometimes showing her a better way to make a slide, or entering into a discussion of some condition. He asked her a good many questions about this matter of being a hen medic, her happiness in the experience, her embarrassments.

It was then that he told her to cut her hair. He'd watched her struggle to confine its bulk in a gauze cap before going with the class into a polo field. "Why don't you cut it off?" he'd asked in his clear tone of curiosity. "It must be a nuisance, as well as a weight."

It was both. "I think a knot makes me look more dignified," he'd laughed. "With internships ahead, dignity can wait," he'd advised.

It had been Mollie who pursued the subject, a thing she was later to learn to do warily with Nicholas. But this time his interest had carried over. "Oh, yes, by all means bob it," he'd said eagerly. "A straight Dutch bob—" He'd laid two fingers above her eyebrows, and nodded. "Yes, and bangs. You've the forehead to take them."

My New York
By MEL HEIMER
NEW YORK—In 1962 an Englishman named John Heywood wrote that it was an ill wind that blew nobody good, and since then Shakespeare and other hacks have swiped and echoed his words. They are true. To prove them, Jay Robinson will kindly step front and center.
Mr. Robinson is just about eligible to be called Mister, having attained his legal maturity of 21 last April. He has, however, been acting since he was seven and in a few weeks he will be onstage at the Empire theater as the star of a new play, Buy Me Blue Ribbons, for the success of which there is high hope. Mr. Robinson both acts and produces, and around Shubert Alley they are saying he is the closest multi-threat man the American theater has seen since dear Noel Coward first invaded our jungles.
Born right here in New York, son of a onetime actress named Bobby Breslaw who now is a successful Miami Beach realtor, and of Stanley Robinson, a director in a huge shirt company—they are divorced—Jay spent eight years of his youth in England. He was educated mostly by tutor and he roamed around the English countryside in theatrical stock companies picking up experience. In 1945 he returned here to continue his career and last year he played with Katharine Hepburn in As You Like It. There is no doubt. He is on his way.
"What I have wanted to do for years," Jay told me over a Hollywood salad in Sardi's today, "is act in The Green Bay Tree. It was a big success here years ago and I always thought I could bring off a revival of it successfully. When I was in As You Like It, I decided the time was ripe—and I set to work."

FIRST OF ALL JAY GOT THE RIGHTS to produce the play, from England, and then he set about raising the money for it. He raised it. Then, with the battle two-thirds won, Shepard Traube, who produced Angel Street, was selected as producer-director and Joseph Schildkraut was signed to play the other lead male role.

The wrong ingredients, alas, had been poured into the concoction. Jay had his ideas of how the young man in the juvenile role should be played, and Schildkraut had his ideas of how his part should be played. The two parts had to complement each other, like musical counterpoint—and the two actors had entirely different approaches to their roles. Schildkraut is a flamboyant actor; Robinson has a more realistic viewpoint.

The dream went smash. Two weeks of rehearsals convinced Jay. If the thing ever was going to make Broadway, somebody would have to change his way of acting or get out. Jay got out. Traube went ahead with the play and, in due time, produced it. The production was fair enough, but it flopped. Opening night, Jay Robinson sat morosely in the audience and watched his illusion pass him by.

Revolutions only go over every 20 years or so—so Jay Robinson prepared to forget the whole thing, to swallow his disappointment and to get on with his career, about which he has an unerring single-mindedness, incidentally.

"I told the whole sad story one day to Sumner Locke Elliott, Australia's poet laureate who has been here in New York for three years writing plays and television dramas," Jay said, grinning, "and when I got through, he looked at me brightly and said 'Son—here we have the makings of a fine comedy.'"

ELLIOTT THEN SAT DOWN AND WROTE IT—Buy Me Blue Ribbons, a play about a precocious 21-year-old actor who sets about to produce, direct and star in a play on Broadway that will be a case for his (he thinks) fabulous talents, and how he turns out to be a bust. The plot goes off on tangents, and the precocious 21-year-old is a bit of an ass, which Jay Robinson is not, but basically the plot was suggested almost completely by the adventure of The Green Bay Tree. The ill wind had blown some good, after all.

This depressing record is lightened only by the fact that 14 states reported decreases ranging from 2 to 18 per cent.

In the current issue of Public Safety Ned H. Dearborn, the council's president, makes sharp comment about "public indifference" and "official apathy" while "the crazy highway fools are still piling up a shocking toll of dead and injured." But, he adds:

"Don't let any one tell you the traffic problem can't be licked. Some states and cities have done it. But it takes guts, energetic action and public support. And so far we haven't had enough of it."

Diplomacy is the art of turning an intolerable outrage into a regrettable incident.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

In spite of the mountain of disclosures of corruption in government, the largest number of public workers, federal, state and municipal, are fine citizens, poorly paid, who keep in motion the wheels of government. Most of them, in all parts of the country, are on one form of civil service or another.

I think, offhand, of the remarkable men in our national parks and forestry services whose devotion to the public good is notable and whose pay is shamefully small. Everybody knows his mailman of whom it can be said that he works hard to small advantage. These are public servants as much as the President of the United States or the Collector of Internal Revenue.

However, there are weaknesses in the structure of government in this country which need to be taken seriously and which will not be corrected by the passage of a code of morals by the Congress. The greatest of these is the cost of nomination and election, which places an elected public official often under deep obligations to individuals and groups. Such obligations are continuing, as elections come often. In Mark Hanna's day, many public officials were dependent upon corporations; today, many are dependent upon labor unions. Even the President of the United States, whoever he may be, is not free from such embarrassments.

Secondly, the pay of a public official is, with the exception of the President, ridiculously inadequate on all levels compared with pay for identical work in private life. For instance, the United States attorney for the southern district of New York, who conducts the largest law office in this city, perhaps in the world, receives $10,000 a year. For similar services, a private lawyer would not regard $100,000 a year too high.

What other compensation does such an official receive? Is it the honor and glory of public office? Is it the prospect of a continuing career in a great public service? A change of President could deprive him of his position; a new attorney general in the President's cabinet could do the same.

As I write this, I cannot help but think of the altogether improper attack on the United States attorney, Irving Saypol, by the judges of the U. S. Court of Appeals in the Remington case. Similarly, I recall how Judge Learned Hand attacked Saypol for wanting high bail and revocation of bail for Communists, wondering whether these Communists would run away after eight of them had already disappeared, four actually having jumped bail. The point I wish to make is that the dignity of position is not adequate to compensate for low pay.

The temptation for moral lapses increases as taxes and the high cost of living rise while pay stands still. These men find it more and more difficult to keep up the front that tenure in certain levels of public office requires. Or to put it on a lower level, a $4,000 a year policeman, who has to buy his own uniforms and revolvers, pay taxes and contribute to pension funds, etc., may look at a $100 tip all out of proportion. A $1,000 bribe becomes almost compelling.

This is not written to condone corruption; my object is to state the facts of an ugly situation.

Nor should exceptions be made of some to the disadvantage of others. A member of Congress who is a lawyer can with legitimacy and without public censure practice law and his law partner may practice before government departments and (Continued on Page Nine)

Miss Doctor

SYNOPSIS
Meet any girl who would have snapped at a chance to marry eminent and elegant Dr. Nicholas. She would have been a doctor's wife, and a doctor's wife is a woman who knows a thing or two about medicine. But when he asked his co-worker, Dr. Mollie Brooks, to marry him, she turned him down—flat. Nicholas was without "heart," she told herself, and she wanted no "heartless" husband. He was cruel not to help young Dr. Peter Shepherd, Boone's new resident surgeon, so urgently in need of sage advice.

CHAPTER TWO
COMING TOWARD HER, along Kingshighway, was Liz Ragsdale, wife of the Senior Resident at Children's; she greeted Mollie indifferently and swung on down the sidewalk to her apartment in Mrs. Wayne's house. Remembering excited gossip about the girl, Mollie looked curiously after Liz. Even Nicholas had said things about her. Did she love her husband? With him, was she gay and young and unrestrained? Was he with her? Mollie could not remember ever having seen young Dr. Ragsdale out of whites. What was he like away from the hospital, what was his personal life?

It seemed everyone had a personal life. Even Nicholas. Winning again at the hurt of the scene which he had precipitated—if he just hadn't—Mollie spoke a mechanical greeting to the doorman. She went into the hall, to the elevator, took herself up to her fifth floor apartment.

Loosening her scarf, Mollie went down the three carpeted steps and lit the candelabra on the piano. Its glow twinkled in its own brightness and sparkled upon the crystal tree which Nicholas had given her. Tonight the exquisite beauty of the little tree hurt—as one is hurt by the sight of some closely intimate possession of a loved one suddenly lost.

Mollie hung her coat away in the closet, crossed to the bathroom to wash her hands and comb her hair. She looked about her, a smile lifting the corners of her mouth. Roses were everywhere. On the curtains at the window, tiny ones upon the tiles around the mirror, huge ones painted upon the pink doors of the cabinets, and even splashed against the pink ceiling. Roses bloomed all over the place—

Mollie sobbed dryly. Oh, doggone Nicholas! Why had he done what he had done this evening?

Just at the minute when she was feeling smugly sure of herself, of the life ahead, of the future... She swiftly crossed the apartment to the balcony where Hazel had left the table set for her; in the small, efficient kitchen were the materials for her dinner. It was Nicholas who had steered her away from a lone woman's proclivity to eat a sandwich—it was Nicholas who had guided every minute of her life as she now led it. He had not wanted her to say that he had trained her, but what else?

The Mollie Brooks who had first come to the city would certainly have eaten a sandwich and at the kitchen table! If she had made any kind of salad, it would have been three slices of tomato on a lettuce leaf, garnished by a dab of bottled mayonnaise. "And it wouldn't have been bad!" she said defiantly, rubbing garlic against the curve of the small wooden bowl.

Many people envied her the friendship there was between her and Nicholas. Because Nicholas was special. The son of an old family, the heir to great wealth, Nicholas had been raised in the best traditions of aristocracy. Good taste, discrimination, were as much a part of the man as the purely bred blood which ran in his veins. His integrity, his sense of honor, were as real as the bones of his compact body. Who's Who gave him age as forty, but that could have been an estimation. Nicholas himself was not age-conscious and being with him so much had taught Mollie not to be. Nicholas was beyond the callousness of youth, with none of the stoddiness attributed to middle age. What else mattered?

He worked extremely hard, but no one ever caught him at it. His closest friends never saw his laboratory, nor found him reading a thick medical book. He would talk professional shop to someone like Mollie, but without reference to himself or his own shop. He wanted outward stimulation from his friends, new interests, new aspects, and so he chose his friends carefully to provide those things.

He had a dozen ways by which he explained his study of medicine, but he never mentioned his passionate interest in bone growth and grafts. The interest was there, and it was intense. Mollie had only known him by sight when he was awarded the Nobel prize for his research in skeletal repair. Excitement and pride in their young doctor had burgeoned throughout the Group; talk about the award had sizzled and popped.

Mollie would always remember her first sight of the great Dr. Cowan after the announcement had been made. So calm did the man appear that she doubted at first that he could be the prize winner. It seemed incredible that a man could so casually wear such an honor. Not as if it didn't matter, but as if this doctor said, "I know that the work I was doing was worth while. If it hadn't been, I wouldn't have bothered."

And somehow his calmness, the quiet surety with which he continued his work on the technique of bone grafting, was more exciting than any visible display of greatness could possibly have been. People who did not know the man marveled at his serenity. Perhaps a few thought it a pose.

It was not, Nicholas had won the prize because he had been deeply interested in his work; he continued that work in the same fashion and for the same reason. Now he was a Staff surgeon of the great Boone Group of hospitals, had established and was directing its bone bank. He still lectured regularly at the medical school, and went off to lecture at other schools. But he did no active surgery, and would do none. When questioned about this, he claimed that he possessed no bedside manner; he'd content himself with training men who were so blessed.

A time or two, some sentimental would venture to remind Dr. Cowan of his duty to humanity. "Nothing interests me less than my duty," he would say coldly. "And my single purpose is to avoid doing the things I should do." Mollie was sure that fastidiousness did not explain his refusal to "practice." She suspected his reason was a part of the manner in which he selected his friends. He never spoke of his family. The

It had been Mollie who pursued the subject, a thing she was later to learn to do warily with Nicholas. But this time his interest had carried over. "Oh, yes, by all means bob it," he said eagerly. "A straight Dutch bob—" He laid two fingers above her eyebrows, and nodded. "Yes, and bangs. You've the forehead to take them."

hatten and recovered in Mexico; Lehman resigned as governor of New York and regained strength as a senator in Washington; and Curley, a stretcher case in federal court, blossomed again in public office in Boston.

So you see, our worries for the health of our public servants are sometimes stronger than the illness itself.

Not that the quick convalescence is confined to them—Frankie Costello has recuperated nicely since his TV show ended.

My New York
By MEL HEIMER
NEW YORK—In 1952 an Englishman named John Heywood wrote that it was an ill wind that blew nobody good, and since then Shakespeare and other hacks have swiped and echoed his words. They are true. To prove them, Jay Robinson will kindly step front and center.
Mr. Robinson is just about eligible to be called Mister, having attained his legal maturity of 21 last April. He has, however, been acting since he was seven and in a few weeks he will be onstage at the Empire theater as the star of a new play, Buy Me Blue Ribbons, for the success of which there is high hope. Mr. Robinson both acts and produces, and around Shubert Alley they are saying he is the closest multiple-threat man the American theater has seen since dear Noel Coward first invaded our jungles.
Born right here in New York, son of a onetime actress named Bobby Breslaw who now is a successful Miami Beach realtor, and of Stanley Robinson, a director in a huge shirt company—they are divorced—Jay spent eight years of his youth in England. He was educated mostly by tutor and he roamed around the English countryside in theatrical stock companies picking up experience. In 1945 he returned here to continue his career and last year he played with Katharine Hepburn in As You Like It. There is no doubt. He is on his way.
"What I have wanted to do for years," Jay told me over a Hollywood salad in Sardi's today, "is act in The Green Bay Tree. It was a big success here years ago and I always thought I could bring off a revival of it successfully. When I was in As You Like It, I decided the time was ripe—and I set to work."

FIRST OF ALL JAY GOT THE RIGHTS to produce the play, from England, and then he set about raising the money for it. He raised it. Then, with the battle two-thirds won, Shepard Traube, who produced Angel Street, was selected as producer-director and Joseph Schildkraut was signed to play the other lead male role.

The wrong ingredients, alas, had been poured into the concoction. Jay had his ideas of how the young man in the juvenile role should be played, and Schildkraut had his ideas of how his part should be played. The two parts had to complement each other, like musical counterpoint—and the two actors had entirely different approaches to their roles. Schildkraut is a flamboyant actor; Robinson has a more realistic viewpoint.

The dream went smash. Two weeks of rehearsals convinced Jay. If the thing ever was going to make Broadway, somebody would have to change his way of acting or get out. Jay got out. Traube went ahead with the play and, in due time, produced it. The production was fair enough, but it flopped. Opening night, Jay Robinson sat morosely in the audience and watched his illusion pass him by.

Revolutions only go over every 20 years or so—so Jay Robinson prepared to forget the whole thing, to swallow his disappointment and to get on with his career, about which he has an unerring single-mindedness, incidentally.

"I told the whole sad story one day to Sumner Locke Elliott, Australia's poet laureate who has been here in New York for three years writing plays and television dramas," Jay said, grinning. "And when I got through, he looked at me brightly and said 'Son—here we have the makings of a fine comedy.'"

ELLIOTT THEN SAT DOWN AND WROTE IT—Buy Me Blue Ribbons, a play about a precocious 21-year-old actor who sets about to produce, direct and star in a play on Broadway that will be a showcase for his (he thinks) fabulous talents, and how he turns out to be a bust. The plot goes off on tangents, and the precocious 21-year-old is a bit of an ass, which Jay Robinson is not, but basically the plot was suggested almost completely by the adventure of The Green Bay Tree. The ill wind had blown some good, after all.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

The nation over, more children under 4 or 5 years old attend the nursery department of a church school than the number that attend day nursery schools. The social education thus afforded very young children is far greater than most people realize.

But some mothers write of the little child who, because of some frightful experience or of too close ties to his mother, evinces unhappiness in such a nursery group and raises a violent ruckus.

An anxious grandmother writes of her grandson, 3½:

"When he was only an infant carried to the nursery of the Sunday school, the strange children scared him so much so that now Sunday school is a dread when he starts out to the class. Even when he goes with his mother, he is shaking. If she leaves him alone he is so frightened he screams. Spankings, scoldings, carrying him home don't cure him. We want him to go to Sunday school but getting him to go is something dreaded by all the family."

In my personal reply I suggested this boy be kept out of Sunday school until he has had sufficient experience at home playing with other children of his age.

THIS WILL HELP him to feel comfortable out of his mother's sight and will put him at ease with other young children.

An increasing number of letters are coming from mothers who tell of their happiness with their children.

For example, a registered nurse writes:

"Being the mother of two children is a glorious thing, and I am grateful for these children, ages 6 and 10. I think our children are wonderful. It's fun working with them, watching their minds grasp new things, watching them tackle problems seemingly unsurmountable and conquering them."

"The advice my husband and I have found in your column has kept us on the right track. Many times in the last ten years when we were faced with a minor problem (which seemed to us major) we have found the solution in your daily column. So we want to say, 'thank you,' very humbly and in all sincerity."

"Also for years I have read to the children, but sometimes the stories were too advanced. The children are ardent listeners and I an ardent reader.

"Now I want guidance for my daughter, 10, in her reading. Please send in the enclosed self-addressed stamped envelope your selected list of books."

This I was glad to do as this list and also the list of "Books from which To Read to The Baby and Young Child," contain the names of books which have stood the test of time as well as of some more good recent volumes. Judging from the large number of parents who are writing for the pre-school child to be had at public libraries and book stores, there seems to be a gaining interest in home reading to young children and it is about the best means of good early education I can think of.

Spuds Growing With No Federal Subsidies Now

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—This is the first year since 1942 that potato production has been completely free of government price supports and Agriculture Department officials are watching developments with considerable interest.

Production has dropped this year. Farmers cut their potato acreage by nearly one-fifth and weather conditions have cut into yields. As a result, officials believe farmers will average much higher prices for their 1951 crop this winter than last.

Supplies are so reduced that for the first time in seven years storage stocks will not be in heavy surplus as 1952 begins.

In fact, if Fall weather causes heavy losses and shrinkage there may actually be a shortage of marketable potatoes to supply demand at current prices.

However, if this season's higher prices lead farmers into making any general increase next year, surplus problems would probably arise next Fall.

MEANWHILE, with price supports out, the department is keeping close check on market conditions.

Officials are wondering if prices for different grades or locations will shift from those in effect when price floors were an important factor.

The uses made of any given size crop may vary considerably without government support.

That is because almost every potato has value under support, and farmers tend to harvest a larger share of the total crop. Moreover, fewer potatoes are used as live-stock feed.

Officials believe that when the potato crop increases from one year to the next, only about half of the increase goes into food. If the crop is surplus, very low prices result, but these declines

The biggest rise took place in the Pacific states where casualties increased to 52 as against 27 the week before. Failures thus far in 1951 total 6,742, for a weekly average of 161, as against 7,707, for a weekly average of 184, in the same period last year.

September Weekly Figures Given

Unemployed workers in Pickaway County received $1,343 in unemployment compensation during September.

C. Thomas, local Bureau of Employment Compensation manager, said the total payments sent to claimants drawing benefits under Ohio law.

Of this $50 was in dependency allowances. The average weekly check in August was $22.58.

More than 353,000 jobs were filled by the 82 offices of the Ohio State Employment Service during the first nine months of 1951, Thomas said. This represents an increase of 23.4 per cent over the same period of a year ago.

Biggest news in the statistics recently released by the employment service lies in the increase in professional and managerial placements made by state employment offices throughout the state.

DURING SEPTEMBER, there was an increase of 77 per cent over August, and, for the nine months ending September 30, there was an increase of 82 per cent, over the same period of a year ago.

These figures indicate a greater acceptance by employers who apparently are making greater use of the local employment office as a source of professional and managerial workers, Thomas said.

Reflecting the rise in employment, and the growing shortage of qualified workers, the employment service statistics show a drop of 3.7 per cent in the total number of new applicants for employment; an increase of 14.8 per cent in the number given aptitude tests, and an increase of 31.6 per cent in the number given proficiency tests.

Further indication of labor shortage is seen in the sharp drop in the number of persons actively seeking employment.

During the first nine months of 1950, an average of more than 157,000 persons per month were looking for jobs through the local state employment offices. This monthly average had dropped to 71,350 during the first nine months of 1951, or a decrease of 54.7 per cent.

New Withholding Income Tax Due On November 1

COLUMBUS, Oct. 24 — Harry F. Bussey, collector of Internal Revenue at Columbus, announced today that employers will be required to withhold income tax from wages paid on and after Nov. 1 at the higher rates provided by the Revenue Act of 1951.

Revised withholding tax rate tables for employers are already being printed in Washington, and are being rushed to the offices of collectors throughout the nation.

Bussey stated that the pamphlets containing the revised tables will be placed in the mails to all employers on his list just as soon as possible. Employers who do not receive the pamphlet within a few days may obtain copies at the Collector's office.

Bussey stated that employers are expected to make every reasonable effort to comply with the provisions respecting the new rates. In view of the short time elapsing between the enactment of the law and the first payroll period affected, many employers may not be able to adjust to the new rates on the first pay day affected.

While no adjustments will be made in the audit of the withholding returns in such cases, he made it clear that this does not in any manner affect the responsibility of employees to meet their full tax liability as required by law when making their returns for the year 1951.

The collector also called attention to the fact that the new law relieves individuals from penalties for failure to comply with the requirements relative to declarations of estimated tax on Form 1040-ES for 1951 if due to the increased rates in the act.

Revised estimates will not be required on account of the rate increase, although the higher tax for 1951 provided in the law will have to be paid when taxpayers file their income tax returns for the year.

Department Store Sales Move Up

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported today that sales of New York City department stores in the week ended Oct. 20 were four per cent higher than the same week last year.

In the preceding week, volume had been unchanged from the 1950 period. Store executives attributed last week's improved showing to increased demand for household appliances.

Nation Facing Danger Despite Arms Buildup

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 — Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson forewarned today an increasing danger to the United States into next Summer despite advances in the mobilization program.

Wilson told the 20th annual New York Herald Tribune Forum that if the nation were confronted with a showdown with Russia she would be capable of a "very rapid expansion."

But the mobilization chief stressed that we cannot "stop to breathe" until the Soviet leaders say to themselves, "if we attack it means the end of us."

Wilson said that in the nation's gradual three-year mobilization the country's production lines are being built up to the point where "we could fight the war right from (these) lines."

He reminded his audience last night that the interests of organized groups and individuals must be subordinated to the welfare of the nation.

Poland Echoes Kremlin Protest

WARSAW, Oct. 24 — Communist Poland lined up behind Russia today, refusing to agree to revision of Italy's peace treaty unless similar treatment is given to Hungary, Bulgaria, Romania and Finland.

The announcement made by Radio Warsaw also demanded that it ally withdraw from the North Atlantic pact as another condition for treaty revision.

Massillon Tigers Still In Lead For Ohio Schoolboy Grid Title

COLUMBUS, Oct. 24—Only a mere handful of the hundreds of teams that started the 1951 Ohio scholastic football season are actually in the running for the mythical Buckeye gridiron crown.

As the teams leg it down the home stretch, one team is in the driver's seat and that is Massillon.

The Tigers have proved their superiority in every contest and a consensus of opinion among the sports writers is that there is no team strong enough to knock the Massillon eleven down.

Steubenville, Lima Central, Barberton, Zanesville, Springfield and Hamilton are waiting for some team to come along and belt the Tigers from the high perch they have held for many years.

MASSILLON PLAYS Warren this weekend and the Panthers, although they downed Alliance by a bigger score than Coach Chuck Mather's crew, are accorded little chance of ending the 20-game winning streak by the Tiger eleven.

Zanesville could move into the title picture if Massillon is beaten. The Blue Demons have displayed a high scoring attack, but their opposition has been of lower caliber than that encountered by other top teams.

Springfield's stock got a sharp boost after an impressive 8-7 win over previously unscathed Hamilton. However, the defeat did not hurt Hamilton from the title picture.

Steubenville continues to rip through opponents. The Big Red dropped a 13-6 decision to the Tiger eleven earlier in the season.

Barberton's undefeated Magics shaded Canton Lincoln last week and face a tough test against Akron St. Vincent.

Lima Central's overwhelming decision over Middletown boosted its winning streak to six games. Van Wert, unbeaten in six tilts, is the next foe for Central.

MEANWHILE, Hamilton will get little chance to revive from the Springfield massacre when the Big Blue plays a rugged Toledo Libbey.

Cleveland Collinwood's unbeaten gridders also face a tough test in Cleveland John Adams. Cleveland Rhodes and Cleveland Heights, the two other undefeated teams in the Cleveland area, put their skins on the line but are expected to come through without difficulty.

Unbeaten Fremont Ross is expected to have its hands full with once-beaten Bowling Green. Youngstown East is the only undefeated team in the Mahoning Valley city. They meet Youngstown Wilson.

Still remaining on the list of unbeaten as the season enters its seventh week are: Painesville Harvey; Ashland; Delaware Willis; Dover; Harrison; Norwood; Bay Village; Orange; New London; Cincinnati Central Vocational; Loudenville; Troy, Warren St. Mary's; Chaucer-Dover; Winterville; and Dublin.

MacPhail Says Major Leagues Killing Minors

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—A House monopoly subcommittee investigating baseball calls former New York Yankee Owner Larry MacPhail today as its final public witness.

Following MacPhail's testimony, the subcommittee will go into closed session with baseball attorneys to discuss legislation aimed at exempting the sport from anti-trust laws.

MacPhail, ex-owner of the Cincinnati and Brooklyn clubs and now a Maryland racehorse breeder, will be questioned about a report he wrote in 1946 for a major league steering committee that studied the legality of the reserve clause.

MacPhail reportedly said that the clause, which binds a player to a team until he is sold or traded, was considered by attorneys of both big leagues to be illegal.

UNDER SUBCOMMITTEE questioning, however, the attorneys denied that they gave this advice. Moreover, they said, pending litigation would be prejudiced if these remarks were made in public.

MacPhail, who emphasized he is appearing under subcommittee summons, said he expects to discuss the minor league situation.

He said the major circuits "had better stop killing the minors before it's too late."

Amazin' Willie Mays 'On Deck' For Draft Call

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—Leo Durocher will have to start making with the magic early for his miracle Giants next season.

The almost-certain loss of amazin' Willie Mays to the service gives Leo a centerfield headache that should make the Winter and Spring quite interesting.

The 20-year-old rookie sensation, who sparked the Giants in their surge to the National League flag, took his draft physical yesterday in Birmingham, Ala. Although a final decision on his status will be a few days in coming, it is generally believed Willie's in.

And whether he goes to the Marines—as is his preference—or whether it is several months before he gets the call, Willie nevertheless can't be counted on to patrol the outer pastures in the Polo Grounds next season.

So Leo has to go shopping. Looking anyway.

On his own ball club the skipper has Bobby Thomson and Whitey Lockman. Both could fill the bill. But Durocher would prefer to keep Thomson on third and Lockman on first—if he can.

Day A Month Due In Jail For Man

CLEVELAND, Oct. 24—Cleveland Leroy O. Parrish, 37, will have to spend the fourth day of each month in solitary confinement for the next one-to-20 years in payment for the killing of Walter Madej, 36.

The sentence was imposed late yesterday by Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court Judge Donald F. Lybarger following Parrish's conviction on manslaughter charges by a seven-man, five-woman jury.

Madej was beaten to death in his West Cleveland home Aug. 4 in the climax to a love triangle involving Mrs. Madej. Parrish was a roomer in the home and admitted fathering Mrs. Madej's fourth child, born shortly after her husband's death.

Sokolsky Heard In Capital City

George E. Sokolsky, whose column appears in The Cincinnati Herald, said Tuesday night in Columbus that America is the only nation in the world attempting to halt the spread of Russian imperialism.

Sokolsky told an audience gathered for the first lecture of a series by prominent speakers:

"It is a curious thing that since February, 1945, to the present, American foreign policy concerning China has changed six times, each time to the benefit of Russia."

officials whose careers may depend upon the good-will of that particular member of Congress.

On the other hand, a member of Congress or some other official, who may legally engage in private business, comes up for miserable opprobrium if he does. The alternative to such a combination of activities is that only those who possess inherited wealth should hold public office. Surely, in the present tax situation, few can honestly save enough in their early years to serve the public at low compensation in their later years.

When millionaire senators speak of a morals code, they might take into consideration that while they are above and beyond money temptations, they are not above and beyond the temptations of vulgar demagoguery, which is perhaps their only way of winning and holding office.

And this applies as well to some other holy men, particularly in the Senate, who manage to get along one way or another, play the role of the people's tribunes when actually they are the slaves of particular pressure groups who flatter their cravings for praise as tribunes of the people.

Driver Guilty Of Manslaughter

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 24—A Scioto County jury of eight men and four women, deliberating nearly two hours, last night returned a verdict of second degree manslaughter against Virgil Boggs, 31, of Portsmouth.

It concerned the Dec. 23 traffic death of Mrs. Maude V. Hostetter.

officials whose careers may depend upon the good-will of that particular member of Congress.

On the other hand, a member of Congress or some other official, who may legally engage in private business, comes up for miserable opprobrium if he does. The alternative to such a combination of activities is that only those who possess inherited wealth should hold public office. Surely, in the present tax situation, few can honestly save enough in their early years to serve the public at low compensation in their later years.

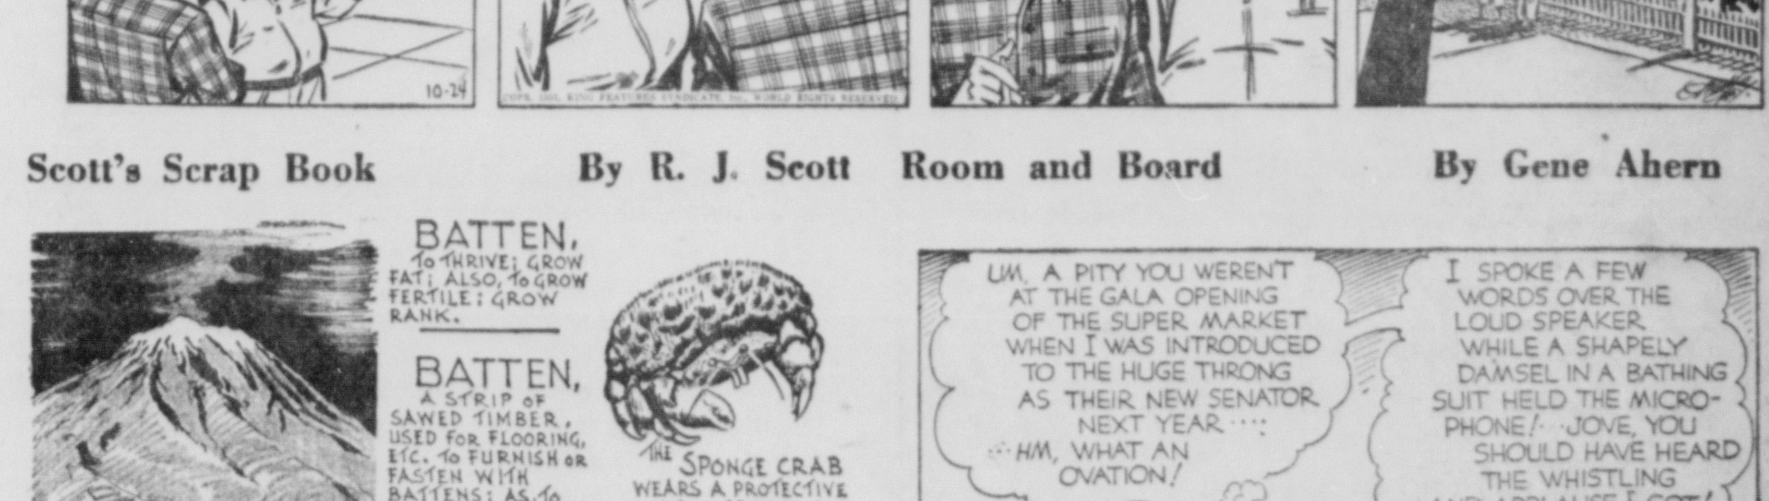

When millionaire senators speak of a morals code, they might take into consideration that while they are above and beyond money temptations, they are not above and beyond the temptations of vulgar demagoguery, which is perhaps their only way of winning and holding office.

And this applies as well to some other holy men, particularly in the Senate, who manage to get along one way or another, play the role of the people's tribunes when actually they are the slaves of particular pressure groups who flatter their cravings for praise as tribunes of the people.

Annual Soil Conservation Election Booked For Nov. 12

Supervisors To Be Named At Meeting

Banquet To Be Held In Service Center

Second annual dinner and election of supervisors of the Pickaway County Soil Conservation District are to be held in Circleville First EUB service center, Nov. 12.

The event is open to all who are interested in the soils of Pickaway County weather landowners or not.

"The welfare of Circleville business enterprises" said Soil Conservationist James Muster, "is dependent primarily on agriculture and that in turn can be only as prosperous as the soils are productive; business personnel may profitably attend this meeting thereby showing their interest in rural trade area."

The election of three supervisors to serve for three years is open to all land owners regardless of whether they are cooperators of the soil conservation district.

THE DINNER is to be served at 6:30 p. m. to be followed by an entertaining and instructive program which may be enjoyed by those who may be unable to attend the dinner. An outside speaker will be heard and several other interesting program numbers will follow.

Though this is only the second annual program, the soil conservation district will soon finish its sixth year of service in Pickaway County.

During that time nearly 300 farms, comprising about 52,000 acres, have accepted conservation farm plans involving many profitable new farm practices.

No tickets will be sold the night of the dinner; they should be procured in advance at the county agent's office not later than Nov. 7.

Second prize, a station wagon, was won by F. B. Weissman of Cincinnati.

Phillips Case Is Continuing In Columbus

COLUMBUS, Oct. 24—The trial of Columbus Insurance Salesman George Phillips, accused of the April 25 murder of Mrs. Ruth Alter, 32-year-old mother, has moved into its third day.

Yesterday spectators, who flooded the Franklin County criminal courtroom, heard a former Columbus laundry worker tell the jury she found a "bloody shirt" in the laundry of Phillips.

The shirt was Prosecutor Ralph J. Bartlett's second tangible evidence offered to tie Phillips to the Alter slaying. First blow to the defense was a calling card, bearing what apparently was his signature, and which was identified as the one found in the vestibule of the Alter home on the night she was slain.

Meanwhile Mrs. Ruth Ward, a witness who testified yesterday that she saw a car like Phillips' parked across the street from the Alter home the day of the murder, reportedly was the target of a threatening phone call during court recess.

'Buck Rogers' One-Man 'Copter Is Developed

GLENDAL, Cal., Oct. 24—War of the future moved closer to the Buck Rogers conception today with the development of a 100-pound, rocket-propelled helicopter that a man can strap to his back.

It was built by the Rotor-Craft Corp. for the Office of Naval Research to carry a man and special armament to inaccessible places, such as rugged, high mountains.

It consists of very little more than two rockets, rotor blades, fuel tank and a simple control column. Its designer, Gilbert MacGill, the head of Rotor-Craft, said:

"It is the nearest approach that has been made to strapping a pair of rockets upon the back of a man and shooting him into space in Buck Rogers fashion."

The weird little machine has been dubbed the "pinwheel." It is now undergoing ground tests at a military base near Los Angeles.

Its performance is classified information. However, it was stated that it can climb at a rate not regarded as possible for a helicopter. With its liquid fuel rockets turned off it can glide like an airplane or descend vertically like a parachute.

War Hero Seeks Place To Live

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 24 — Patrick Carioggia—called the most decorated enlisted men in the nation's history—appealed to Erie newspapers today to find him a "decent place to live."

The 28-year-old former soldier has been living with his wife and 14-month-old daughter, Bonny, in a cellar which his doctor claims is responsible for the infant's colds.

Carioggia was awarded 17 medals, decorations and citations during World War II. He is working as a mechanic in Erie.

School Issues On Increase

COLUMBUS, Oct. 24 — School bond issue totaling over $100 million will go before Ohio voters in the November election.

The Ohio State university bureau of educational research reported that the number of school districts with bond proposals dropped from 1950 but the total sought was $4 million over last year.

In addition, special school levies will be up to the voters in 756 school districts, instead of 500 districts as in last year.

Insane Man's Escape Brings Gun Battle

PETERSBURG, Va., Oct. 24 — A grim toll of two dead and six persons wounded today marked a madman's brief fling at freedom which resulted in a seven-hour gun battle with state police.

The escapee, a patient in Petersburg Hospital for the Insane since 1937, was slain by police in the farmhouse where he sought refuge.

His death ended an all-day battle in which officers were forced to employ armored cars, airplanes, tear gas bombs and machineguns in their attempts to apprehend the killer.

State Trooper Wallace Simpson, 39, of Colonial Heights, Va., was killed when struck in the face with a blast from the shotgun Johnson apparently found in the farm house.

Earlier in the day the crazed patient made his break from the institution with a pistol. He wounded two attendants and two other Troopers twice saturated the two-story farm building with tear gas without halting the blasts from Johnson's shotgun. He was slain finally when officers raked the building with machinegun fire.

Ma. Gen. James W. Spry, has been in Spain for two months, carrying on recommendations made by the late Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, former Chief of Naval Operations.
